

May 9 2017

FCC,

I am filing this complaint against the “Restoring Internet Freedom” bill.
In no way does it restore internet freedom.

The federal government has a duty to oversee, and regulate the internet to ensure that all data passes freely and has equal rights for delivery and speed – for all companies.

The Federal Government must enforce equal rights for blacks in America. Federal Law had to ensure the rights for Women to vote. The few sought to disenfranchise the many. That “all are created equal” is the foundation of this nation, and it must be enforced.

Giving certain companies the rights to restrict, hamper, or charge extra for select types of communication goes against the American Way that all are created equal. In as much as they say they won’t- history shows that they have, did, and will do it again, if given the opportunity.

It is the responsibility of the Federal Government to ensure that, like this nation’s highway system, the “Information Superhighway” (the internet) remain similarly unencumbered and all traffic, every car, every bit of data, have equal rights for delivery and speed.

As the owner of a small video production company reliant on internet streaming– pushing video across the internet, I don’t want to be like Netflix, who was forced to pay extra to some companies ensure that their video data got the same speed as all other data.
Internet gateway companies have done it before. They will do it again - if you let them.

Don’t let them.

I ask that the FCC continue to do its duty to ensure equal rights for all data on the internet.
I ask that the FCC continue to regulate so that companies cannot pick and choose who gets preferential treatment.

Thank you.